THE LANCASTERIAN SYSTEM OF TEACHING. In connection with the fore oing history of the Linsly Institute, a brief description of the Lancaserian system of teaching may be found to be of interest. The modern system of object teaching, it is claimed, is the Outgrowth of the Lancasterian system, and object lieachihg is HOw recognized as a most desirable method for improving the youthful mind. The Lancasterian system is said to have been Originated about 3 century a8o by Dr. Bell, a Scotchman, W11o, having charge of the education of the orphans of British soldiers in Ma1r33S, found the system so successful that he subsequently introduced it ihto England, from which it spread to the United States. It was formerly called the Madras system, but meeting with an enthusiastic advocate in Joseph Lancaster, the System wascafterwmds known as the Lancasterian. The following graphic description of the system is from the pen of Col. H. B. Hubbard, who was a pupil of the Linsly Institute when the Lancasterian system was in vogue: It has been suggested to the writer, who learned his A B Cs while tracing them in the sand in the sand boxes at the Lancasterian Academy, that a description of the peculiar method of teaching, as well asthe cruelties inflicted in the way of punishments...
