Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of My God, and he shall go out thence no more; and I will write upon him the name of My God and the name of the city of My God, the new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from My God, and Mine own new name. -- Epistle to Philadelphia. In this, as in the previous instances, the evil which the overcomer had to encounter and conquer is to be ascertained from the description which is given of the local Church and its perils. Yet it appears from the Lords own testimony that this Church at Philadelphia, distant only a few miles from Sardis, was in good spiritual condition. While free, as that of Sardis was, from heresies, controversies, and persecutions, it did not fall like that neighbouring Church into heartless formalism. The little congregation at Philadelphia was steadfast and obedient. Still there is enough in the epistle to indicate that there were inducements to waver and falter, and that such were the influences which the heir of this promise must overcome. Again the epistle throws U3 back on ancient histoiy. One recalled the times of Moses: another those of Elijah: this refers to the days of Hezekiah, when the adversary was no prophet like Balaam or prophetess like Jezebel, but the imperial power of Assyria menacing with its armies the little kingdom of Judah. It was in the Temple...
